Ma's Tip On Keeping Warm

We all know that Ma can cope well with the heat as she prepares hot food for her family. None of that fast food business.....

But now that we are coming into colder weather she also has these tips on how to Keep Warm Safely without gas or electric heating.

Suggestions for the whole family include advice for elderly relatives etc...

Have hot/warm foods and drinks - i.e. soup, warm milk.

Wear plenty of clothing - layers, woollen hat, gloves, thick socks, and use a blanket, space blanket, doona or sleeping bag when sitting.

Anytime when not active, wear another layer of clothing Try going to bed - if possible pre-warm the bed using a hot water bottle. If electricity is available you can use an electric blanket.

Activities such as reading stories to children will entertain them in bed.

Increase physical activity - i.e. walk, jog, swimming at heated pools.

Visit family, friends or public places with heating - i.e. shopping centres, libraries, local clubs or movies.

Using alternative heaters - consider heating only one room (choose the easiest room to heat) and/or create temporary partitions with blankets etc for open plan houses.

Reduce draughts around doors and windows i.e. draught stoppers, newspapers, draw curtains and blinds.

Avoid any activity which will use up your heat energy i.e. handling cold objects, drinking cold water.

Safety Issues

Check open fireplaces are operational before lighting - i.e. chimney clear, fire screen in place.

Kerosene and camping heaters - ensure adequate ventilation while in use.

Do not leave any form of heating running whilst absent from the house.

Do not drink alcohol to feel warm, as this cools the body.

Check on older/frail people living on their own without heating.

Check on physically or mentally challenged people living on their own without heating.

Where electricity is available:

Do not leave electric blankets switched on while you are in bed or absent from the house.

Take care with heaters - be careful of clothing close to bar heaters.

Don't overload your electrical system.

Don't smoke in bed

Don't leave your cooker unattended

According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics 'Australian Social Trends' Report of 2000, some 123 people died from accidental fire or flame injuries in 1998.

More than half of those – 70 – occurred in a home fire. Although this represented a 47 per cent drop in general fire-related deaths in the 30-year period of review, deaths due to fires in the home dropped by only 20 per cent.
