

In the beginning there was a gathering of people in South Australia to commemorate the life and works of their King. And it was declared... 'Let the festivities begin!'. As if by magic there appeared a Sizzler of the highest calibre; the finest of Barrossa wines; loaves of fresh bread from Baker's Delight and a never ending supply of sausages from Steak of the Art.

The Feeding of the Masses

Taking the loaves and sausages Keven the Sizzler gave them to the people.

They all ate and were satisfied.

And it was said that water was turned to wine.

And some people sure drank a lot of water...

people became fully clothed.

And it was to pass that after eating the forbidden sausages there appeared a hat from Allington's Hardware Store and those

And there was music. The Rock was cast and Country sounds were heard echoing across the fertile plains.

And there was to be much merrymaking. And there arrived people bearing gifts.

And more wine was consumed.

And some say that their cup overfloweth. Hic!

There appeared an inscription signifying what was... and what will be.

It was declared that at the next rising of the sun there was to be an ongoing celebration for the masses to commemorate the King at a predestied place.

That place was to be named Munno Para.

The merriment continued into the next day.

All hands available were summonsed to assist in preparing for a special day of remembrance

Some followers wished that this day would continue for all eternity.

entrance tickets to the Slim Dusty Tribute Show.

The news spread fast and before the sun had fully risen there appeared many onlookers bearing

When the preparation was done it was time for the festivities to begin.

The special event was to be recorded in the history books of country music, for it was to be a significant day in the building of a permanent memorial structure in Kempsey... The hometown of the King.

And memorabilia and precious artefacts were displayed with care and gloves of peace and kindness.

And the pilgrims filed in two by two... for they were the wise men and the chosen people who had purchased their tickets 40 days and 40 nights earlier.
